Types of Plumbers Deal with Different Aspects:

Residential plumbers engage in installing plumbing systems in a house and repairing them. This may include fixing dripping faucets, unclogging drains, or installing plumbing for a new appliance.

Commercial plumbers work on larger plumbing systems within offices, restaurants, and other establishments. But they are working on larger plumbing systems in offices with restaurant and commercial toilets & bathrooms, whereby they deal with more complex systems and higher water pressure.

Industrial plumbers: these deal with complex piping systems in factories and industrial installations. Very complex piping systems are dealt with in factories and industrial facilities, requiring a very high understanding of industrial processes and safety protocols.
